Reflective essay

I along with most people, I like writing about what I'm passionate and care about. Now that I'm at Howard, I feel more than ever that I truly have the ability to do this. It's not just on one assignment but essentially all my assignments that I have the opportunity to infuse a bit of me. Concerning my writing, I've always been a writer who likes to articulate my thoughts into words. However, sometimes this hasn't been the easiest for me. To really be able to not just communicate these words through their literal meanings but to also attach the emotion and purpose from these thoughts. Over the semester, I have grown as a writer and also writing through the black lens. I see the power behind my experience and perspective in educating and starting dialogues with others. I can now say that I have more effective and emotional writing.
